

Dubious claims about Glyphosate rainfastness

"FARMERS may be wasting their money paying premium prices for Glyphosate products claiming rainfastness in an hour or even less" is the conclusion reached by 4Farmers agronomist Terry Piper.

"In the light of our recent trial work, these claims appear very dubious, especially as there is a distinct lack of evidence in the public domain supporting these claims and the people making them don't seem to be taken to task on them.

"4Farmers has always been wary of these superior rainfastness claims, especially as the only independent work we know of refutes them, so we have recently done some rainfast trials.

"They indicate that 4Farmers 470 formulation is the same as any other product in this respect, yet it doesn't make these claims, so people buying other brands because of superior rainfastness claims should have another look".

"There are no extravagant claims about 4Farmers Glyphosate or big price premiums demanded, but it is loaded with extra wetters and often tests out higher than its 470 formulation suggests, plus it is reported to have better mixing properties than cheaper potassium formulations.

"It is no wonder that we have a good following on our 4Farmers Glyphosate, because it offers good value, irrespective of this rainfastness issue".

Results including plant pots from the trial will be on display at Wagin Woolarama and should be a must-see for every farmer.
